

KWM & NICHE – Challenging Homophobia with ‘The Power of Together’

Launch Cocktail Evening 2015

King & Wood Mallesons, as part of its ongoing support of the LGBTI community, is proud to host an event celebrating the launch of the National Institute for Challenging Homophobia Education (NICHE). We would be delighted if you could join us to celebrate this pride-filled occasion with drinks and canapes.

NICHE is a not-for-profit organisation that supports lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex (LGBTI) young people in regional, rural and remote Australia. Working with schools, community groups, local councils and government bodies, NICHE aims to tackle rural and regional homophobia and raise awareness of the unique issues facing LGBTI young people in those areas.

Daniel Witthaus, CEO and founder of NICHE, will tell us all about NICHE’s work. Rowena Allen, Victoria’s first Gender and Sexuality Commissioner, will speak about how she champions the rights of LGBTI Victorians within the Government. As founding CEO of UnitingCare Cutting Edge, Ms Allen established Victoria’s first rural support group for young LGBTI people, giving her a very practical understanding of the issues faced in regional and rural areas.

King & Wood Mallesons is thrilled to have helped set up NICHE and, through its ongoing commitment to LGBTI inclusion in the workplace and wider community, would like to celebrate this milestone with you.

We hope you can join us for this special event.
